Reason for the Review

The main reasons for the application is to reduce dependence on the national grid, secure energy prices for the future, reduce the farms carbon footprint and provide an additional income stream to the farm. The height of the proposed turbine is not detrimental to the area and is located behind the farm buildings thereby reducing the overall visual impact.

Both Scottish and National government policy supports small scale renewable energy projects that directly contribute and support rural businesses.

Support the transition to a low carbon future in a changing climate, taking full account of flood risk and coastal change, and encourage the reuse of existing resources, including conversion of existing buildings, and encourage the use of renewable resources (for example, by the development of renewable energy);

Delivering sustainable development – Building a strong, competitive economy, the government is committed to securing economic growth in order to create jobs and prosperity, building on the country's inherent strengths, and to meeting the twin challenges of global competition and of a low carbon future. Again Scotland sets out a clear economic vision and strategy for their area which positively and proactively encourages sustainable economic growth;

Support existing business sectors, taking account of whether they are expanding or contracting and, where possible, identify and plan for new emerging sectors likely to locate in their area. Policies should be flexible enough to accommodate needs not anticipated in the plan and to allow a rapid response to changes in economic circumstances.

Meeting the challenge of climate change, flooding and coastal change

Planning plays a key role in helping shape places to secure radical reductions in greenhouse gas emissions, minimising vulnerability and providing resilience to the impacts of climate change, and supporting the delivery of renewable and low carbon energy and associated infrastructure. This is central to the economic, social and environmental dimensions of sustainable development.

This project helps to help increase the supply of renewable and low carbon energy, local planning authorities should recognise the responsibility on all communities to contribute to energy generation from renewable or low carbon sources. They should:

Have a positive strategy to promote energy from renewable and low carbon sources;

Design their policies to maximise renewable and low carbon energy development while ensuring that adverse impacts are addressed satisfactorily, including cumulative landscape and visual impacts;

Consider indentifying suitable areas for renewable and low carbon energy sources, and supporting infrastructure, where this would help secure the development of such sources.
